P R E F A C E.

THOSE who have studied that period of our annals which is occupied by the reign of Charles the First and the Commonwealth, not only in the pages of modern historians and of contemporaries who wrote consciously for posterity, but also in the immense masses of unclassified and often uncatalogued documents, journals, state papers, letters, treatises, ballads, and sermons, in which the hopes, fears, and desires of the people expressed themselves from day to day, may probably have remarked, if their pursuits have led them to contrast our Civil War with other portions of British or European history, that then, for the first time in the modern world, individual personality began to exercise a marked effect upon contemporary politics. In the preceding ages, from the time indeed when freedom sunk under the organized imperialism of the Cæsars, until the outburst of modern thought in the sixteenth century, human progress had been but little accelerated by personal qualities. The ignorance of external nature was too dense, the all-pervading influence of the dominant theology too strong, the terrors it wielded and the punishments it threatened too frightful for the energy of any one person to become conspicuous in directing public events or moulding the thoughts of others, except in those rare cases where the minds of men had already been prepared by the Church's teaching, or by their inherent or inherited superstitions. In the career of St. Bernard indeed, and the few others of his stamp, who shed such lustre over the dark times in which they were placed, we see the religious instinct of Western Christendom stirred to a higher pitch of devotion by the labours of a single man; but where the lessons of the reformer took a direction contrary to ecclesiastical teaching (and then theology seemed to embrace the whole area of human thought), one result only was possible. The fate of those who struggled to win freedom for themselves and their kind is a sufficient proof that it was neither the want of intellect, energy, nor high-souled devotion, that rendered their lives and labours unfruitful. Even the passionate prophecy and withering scorn of the great Florentine could do nothing towards rousing mankind from its lethargy. The first desire of his heart was indeed accomplished; Dante won for his Beatrice the highest place in the ideal world of love and beauty, but against the "she-wolf" even the invectives of the "Inferno" were powerless.

The education of the European mind has progressed slowly; it was not until the Tudor period of our history that society could have existed without the protection of a powerful religious caste. A universal theocracy was the only institution strong and free enough to curb the oppressor, and with a sufficiently extended mental vision to attempt the work of legislation: by its means the brutal tyranny of the feudal lord was somewhat kept in check; and his fiercer passions, at least, did not pass entirely without rebuke. Laws were made for the protection of slaves, infants, and women, such as even a Norman baron or an Italian count feared to disobey. It does not seem possible that moral truths could have been brought home to the hearts of the people by any other means. If so great a misfortune could have happened as the premature overthrow of this spiritual dominion it is almost certain that a similar institution, or once differing in outward accidents only, would have taken its place. And if it had not been so, the people would have lapsed into mere pagan sensualism; a compound of Teutonic materialism and Southern creature-worship without the nobleness of the one or the poetry of the other.

The great religious contests of the sixteenth century, while they released the races of Northern Europe from subjection to one class of ideas which they had outgrown, left almost everything to be accomplished in the direction of personal freedom. It is doubtful whether any of those engaged on either side in that memorable strife even understood what is now meant by liberty.

The singularly complex nature of our political and social relations on the accession of the Stuart dynasty tended greatly to develop individual energies, and thus to produce that marked contrast between the Civil-War era and all preceding ones, which is perhaps the most interesting phenomenon presented by that memorable contest. Probably no descendant of the Plantagenets, then alive, was more unfitted to rule England than the weak person whom political necessity forced upon us on the death of the noble-minded Elizabeth. It would have taxed the highest energies of a wise and brave sovereign to have governed a land so distracted with religious factions with dignity and in peace. James possessed neither courage nor wisdom, but had the absence of those virtues been his chief defect, his reign might have caused less evil. His political bigotry, mitigated as it was in action by his extreme cowardice, was not calculated to produce the worst results; but unfortunately, like many other feeble-minded men, he took intense delight in theological speculation. As the head of the established religion in England it was the obvious duty of the chief magistrate to make that body as little offensive to the people as the nature of so singular a compromise would admit of; but, from influences which it probably would be easy to trace to their origin, the king's mind was bent upon pursuing an opposite course. The extreme nature of the religious factions into which his realms were divided, spurred on the zeal of the theologian not to be a minister of peace but an enforcer of uniformity. The Catholics, who had received in the early part of the reign some slight mercy, when the monarch found himself sufficiently powerful to do so, were persecuted with unrelenting severity. The increasing body of Puritans (a designation which must be understood to include persons of nearly all varieties of opinion who were opposed to despotism in the state and extreme Episcopalian views on Church government) hated the ruling powers almost as intensely as did their brethren of the Roman obedience, and with nearly as good reason; for, although they were not subject to capital punishment, like the religious teachers of the ancient faith, their lives were rendered miserable by state tyranny. The Puritans certainly had not, at first, any strong feelings against monarchical power when restrained within due bounds,—some, indeed, professing to the last their desire for “a covenanted King,” but they naturally became, as time wore on, less and less attached to the existing order of things. It is probable that a strong-willed and unprincipled monarch might have played off these factions against each other with considerable personal advantage. It is evident that James endeavoured to do so, and as he had at times able ministers about him, it is not unlikely that even he might have succeeded had England been his only kingdom; Scotland and Ireland happily presented unsurmountable obstacles to the crushing out of either of these religious bodies. The northern kingdom was entirely Puritan; the Catholic Church in that region had not merely fallen,—its members had been so hunted down by their successors, that hardly an avowed professor of the old religion was to be found. Episcopacy, indeed, was still supposed to exist, but its strange and unedifying history was so well known, that we cannot suppose it appealed very forcibly to the consciences of any but those dependent on government patronage. On the other hand, Ireland had clung with the tenacity of despair to the mediæval form of Christianity—it was the only thing that connected her with the far-off past, that carried back the memories of her poor persecuted children to times when they had at least one powerful protector on earth from the oppression of their conquerors. This passionate attachment decked the mythic past with the rainbow tints of unreal beauty, it became part of an Irishman's faith that his country had once had a golden age of peace, prosperity, and virtue, under the mild guardianship of the Church of God.

The attempts made to convert these kingdoms to the king's views were too weak to produce any effect except irritation ; but they must be borne in mind in calculating the forces which produced the revolution that followed.

Charles was a far nobler man than his father : had he ruled in other times he might have left a favourable impression on posterity ; in the circumstances in which he was placed his higher qualities were almost entirely hidden. Whether it was by force of hereditary transmission, or the result of education, that Charles resembled James cannot now be known, but the same weak nature is remarkable in the child as in the parent,—the same obstinacy, the same theological instincts with even less distrust of his own power of enforcing conviction, and a greater affection for the mechanical parts of religious worship. His faith in the sanctity of his own office was probably more sincere than his father's. It was dangerous in proportion to its sincerity.

The history of the political and religious struggles of these reigns, of the forty years' battle for liberty, fought with varying success at Westminster when there was a parliament at the Council Board, in the law-courts and the shires when the king ruled alone, has come down to us in a very unattractive form. The various leaders have as yet had but little justice done to their memories, the more obscure men have quite passed out of mind. Let us remember that to them we owe much of what followed both of good and evil.

The long contest, ere an appeal to arms was thought of, prepared English minds for self-government, and shook to its base that belief in the holiness of the kingly office which the Reformation had fostered, and which subsequent events had developed into an article of faith. Ere the war of words was suspended by a sterner conflict, I believe that among the mass of the people the dream of the divine right of kings had passed away for ever. A figment such as that, once shattered, could never be restored; even the faturnalia of the Restoration could only reproduce its semblance in those professionally interested. The cry—found no echo in men's hearts. If the reader wishes to hear it, and is not to be deterred by blasphemy or filth, let him read the sermons of the court-preachers and the rhyme-books of the court-poets.

It is not my intention, in this reprint of a Civil-War tract, to trace, even in the merest skeleton manner, the history of the period. A word or two seems, however, to be required to account for the appearance of this little book. I have long been making collections relative to the lives of those persons who were engaged on both sides during the Great Civil War. In the work I have in progress I shall include, as far as possible, every officer who bore a commission from King or Parliament, and many other persons who rendered themselves conspicuous in the convulsions of the time. Of course I shall not omit to give a place to the many noble women also who suffered on either side. It will be readily understood, that although the work in question will be made as concise as is possible, consistently with communicating the facts of the various lives, it is yet a laborious undertaking, which cannot be brought to a conclusion for some years. It was, however, suggested to me by my publisher, that a reprint of the following Army List would be welcomed by many students as a handy work of reference in reading contemporary historians. Its usefulness to those engaged in topographical and genealogical studies is evident. To such a book it was perhaps unnecessary to add notes; I have, nevertheless, for the convenience of the general reader, given a line or two of biographical memoranda to the names of most of those persons who rendered themselves prominent. To have enlarged them further so as to include the more obscure would have been but to anticipate very imperfectly a future publication. The tract, of which the following pages are a reprint, is preserved in the Bodleian Library. I never saw another copy, but I believe one or two more exist; it is, however, of extreme rarity. The list of the Earl of Essex's army is to be found also in a separate pamphlet, with which this edition has been compared. A reprint of its title-page occurs here in the proper place.

Although the date 1642 occurs on the title, it is certain that this List was not issued until that year had, according to modern computation, closed. It will be borne in mind, however, that the legal year in the seventeenth century began on the 25th of March, the feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and that, therefore, a book issued from the press before that day in the year 1643 would bear the date of the previous year. The occurrence of Philip Skippon, as "Serjeant Major General and President of the Councill of Warre," is decisive on this point.* It is not so easy to account for the name of "Sir Faithful Fortescue" being retained in the list of the Parliamentary army.

My especial thanks are due to Monsieur J. A. Van Lennep of Zeyft, near Utrecht, for a long and extremely interesting communication relative to Dr. Doreflaus, which I have used in the note attached to that person's name. I have a melancholy pleasure also in expressing my obligations to the late Rev. John Ward, of Wath Rectory, near Ripon.

NOTE.

To this Second Edition I have added an Appendix, consisting of four other lists of soldiers, which will be found useful by students of seventeenth-century history. The notes also have been revised and added to, and some errors corrected.

I have received valuable information from Colonel Chester, the Rev. Edward Saint Leger, and William H. Turner, Esq.

The Index is mainly the work of my daughters, Florence and Mabel.

<sup>19</sup> Robert Dormer, second Baron Dormer. Created Earl of Carnarvon, Aug. 2, 1628. Slain at the first battle of Newbury, Sept. 20, 1643. His jewels and plate were seized by the Parliamentary army while on their way to Oxford. He was run through the body by a trooper to whom he was personally known. When asked if he had any suit to make to the king ere he passed away, the dying cavalier replied:—"I will not die with a suit in my mouth to any king save to the King of Heaven."

<sup>23</sup> James Stanley, son and heir of William Stanley, Earl of Derby. Summoned to the House of Peers during his father's life; succeeded to his father's earldom in 1642. He was defeated at the Battle of Wigan-Lane, co. Lancaster, by Col. Robert Lilburne, but succeeded in joining King Charles II. at Worcester, after whose rout there, Sept. 3, 1651, he fled with him into Staffordshire. Taken prisoner at Newport, in Cheshire, by Colonel Edge, tried by court martial, and beheaded at Bolton, in Lancashire, October 15, 1651. The timber of the scaffold on which he suffered is said to have been a relic from Lathom House.

<sup>53</sup> Second son of Henry, fifth Earl of Huntingdon, who died 14th November, 1643, by Elizabeth, third daughter of Ferdinando Stanley, Earl of Derby. Created Baron of Loughborough, co. Leicester, 23rd October, 1643. Died without issue, 1666.

“Tho. Glenham cui castra Carleolente
& Eboracense Monumentum sunt

& Oxonium Epitaphium.”—LLOYD'S Memoires, p. 552.

His brother, Henry Glenham, some time Dean of Bristol, was Bishop of St. Asaph, 1667–1670.

indicated. He was severely, but not fatally, wounded by a blow on the head with a pole-axe at Lanfdowne fight, July 5, 1643. Another person of this name, Sir William Vaughan, fought for the King in South Wales, Cheshire, and Shropshire. He was killed near Dublin, Aug. 22, 1649.

<sup>56</sup> Sir Joseph Wagstaffe was wounded when the Royalists took Lichfield, 1643. Engaged in the Western rising, 1655, and was with difficulty dissuaded by his companions from hanging the Parliamentary Judges and the High Sheriff of the county, who had fallen into their hands at Salisbury. After the ruin of the enterprise he escaped abroad.—CLARENDON'S History, p. 825.

<sup>57</sup> The Concys were a Lincolnshire family, several of whose members were engaged on the Royal side during the Civil War. I am unable to identify the person mentioned above with any certainty. Sir Sutton Coney, son and heir of Sir William Coney, Knight, compounded for his estate in the sum of 2648*l*. A Captain Coney is stated to have been slain ex parte regis at Whalley, in Lancashire. A William Coney was one of the Lincolnshire gentlemen who offered to subscribe horses for the King in the summer of 1642. A Richard Coney of Grantham was indicted for High Treason at Grantham Sessions in the spring of 1643, by the adherents of the Parliament. A man described as "Captaine Corney," but who I believe to be the person who served under Sir Thomas Glenham, was taken prisoner by Oliver Cromwell at Burleigh House, and sent in custody to Cambridge, in July, 1643. The Elizabethan Heralds say that the first of the Concys who settled in England came from "Byam," in France, with Isabella, wife of Edward II. There is a pedigree of the family in the Lincolnshire Herald's Visitation of 1562. Arms, sable, a bar and two barrulets between three conies current, argent. MS. F. 22. Queen's Coll. Oxf. fol. 38. Yorke's Union of Honour, 2nd, pages 28. Tanner MS. LXII. I. fol. 196. Decl. of Commons upon two letters sent by Sir John Brookes. Dring, 24. Mr. Charles Dallison, his Speech, fol. 1642 (Soc. Ant. Broadfides). Royal Martyrs, fol. 1660.

<sup>58</sup> Sir Francis Wortley was son of Sir Richard Wortley, Knight, of Wortley, co. York. Educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, created a Baronet, June 29, 1611. In the early part of the Civil War he fortified

Wortley Hall for the King. He was taken prisoner at Walton Hall near Wakefield, the seat of the knightly family of Waterton, on the 3rd of June, 1644. Authorities differ as to the time and place of his death; it is, however, certain that he departed to his rest before the monarchy was restored. He was the author of several books, a list of which may be seen in Wood's Athenæ Oxon. His arms were argent, on a bend between six martlets gules, three bezants. Motto, Τας φιλιας σπουδαζω, τας εχθρας καταφρονω.—HUNTER'S Deanery of Doncaster, vol. ii. pp. 308–326.

<sup>60</sup> William Villiers, Viscount Grandifon in the peerage of Ireland, son and heir of Sir Edward Villiers, President of Munster; brother to George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, by his wife Barbara, daughter of Sir John St. John of Tregose, co. Wilts, and niece to Oliver St. John, created Viscount Grandifon, with limitation of the title to his niece's posterity. Lord Grandifon was wounded at the siege of Bristol, July 26, 1643, and died of his wounds at Oxford the 29th of September following. He lies buried under a stately monument in Christ Church Cathedral, which his daughter, Barbara Villiers, afterwards Duchess of Cleveland, erected to his memory.

<sup>61</sup> Sir John Digby, a younger son of the Earl of Bristol (note 39). Raised a troop of horse for the King; commanded the cavalry at the battle of Stratton, May 16, 1643. He was one of the six persons excepted from mercy at the surrender of Pontefract Castle, but succeeded in eluding his enemies by lying hid within its precincts for about ten days, and then making his escape unobserved. Sir John Digby survived the Restoration.—CLARENDON'S Hist. pp. 397, 425, 670. SURTEES' Miscellany, vol. i. pp. 2, 93.

<sup>62</sup> John Tempest, ninth son of Sir Stephen Tempest of . . . co. York. Slain at the taking of Drogheda, Aug. 14, 1649. He was a Roman Catholic. Arms, argent, a bend between six martlets, fable.—DUGDALE'S Herald's Visit. Yorks. 1665–6, p. 360.

<sup>63</sup> The House of Commons resolved on 10th Dec. 1642, that Sir John Spilman, Knight, Sir William Doyly, Captain Crane, and other persons of the county of Norfolk, should be "forthwith sent for as delinquents for affronting the committees when they were met upon the service of the Parliament." John Crane of Loughton, co. Bucks, was fined 1080*l.* on 23rd Sep. 1647; his offence being "that he deserted his dwelling and lived in Oxford" when it was a royal garrison—Com. Jour. II. 884; V. 313.

<sup>66</sup> Three brothers of the family of Vavafour of Hafelwood, co. York, were in the King's service. They are thus noticed in Dugdale's Pedigree (Herald's Visit. co. York, 1665-6, p. 345):—

"I. Sir Walter Vavafour of Hafelwood, Bart. Colonell of a Regiment of Horse under the right honorable Willm Marquess of Newcastle, for the service of K. Charles the first, in the times of the late Rebellion. Æt. 53 ann. 13 Aug. 1666.

"II. Willm Vavafour a Major in that Regiment of Horse under his brother.

"III. Thomas Vavafour slayne in y<sup>e</sup> Battaille of Marston Moore neer Yorke, fighting on the behalfe of K. Ch. the first, a<sup>o</sup> 1644."

<sup>67</sup> Philip Stanhope, first Baron Stanhope of Shelford, and Earl of Chesterfield, had two sons in the Royal Army.

Ferdinando, his fourth son, M.P. for Tamworth in the Parliament of 1640; D.C.L. Oxford, 1642. Slain at Bridgford, co. Notts, 1643. This is probably the person here indicated.

Philip, fifth son, lost his life at his father's seat at Shelford when it was taken by storm, Oct. 27, 1645.

Isaac Dorislaus.

Isaac Dorislaus was a friend of Sir Henry Mildmay, and the first Lord Brooke. Through the influence of the latter he was appointed to read a historical lecture in Cambridge; but was soon silenced on account of his maintaining anti-monarchical principles. His great knowledge of Civil Law caused his nomination to the office of Judge Advocate of the Army. For the same reason he was shortly afterwards made one of the Judges of the Court of Admiralty. He made himself especially hateful to the Royalists by assisting to prepare the charge of High Treason against Charles I. In the beginning of May, 1649, he sailed for Holland as Envoy from the English Parliament to the Hague; he had only spent a very short time there when, on the 12th, or, according to others, the 15th of May, as he was taking his supper at the Witte Zwaan (White Swan) Inn, some five or six men in masks entered the house, blew out the lights in the passage, and rushed into the public room, where he, in company with eleven other guests, was sitting. Two of the conspirators immediately made a murderous attack on a Dutch gentleman named Grijp van Valkenfeyn, supposing him to be the English Envoy. Finding out their mistake, however, they set upon Doreflaus, and slew him with many wounds, exclaiming as they did the deed, "Thus dies one of the King's Judges." The leader of this execrable gang was Col. Walter Whitford, son of Walter Whitford, D.D., of Monkland, in Scotland. He received a pension for this "generous action" (Wood) after the Restoration. The English Parliament gave their faithful servant a magnificent funeral in Westminster Abbey, June 14, 1649; but after the Restoration those in power disturbed the body. His dust now rests with that of Admiral Blake, and others such as he, in a pit in St. Margaret's Churchyard.—JOHN LODEN GOLLPRIED'S Kronyck, iv. 454. He spent the last two years of his life at Ipswich. His body was buried in the south aisle of Westminster Abbey, 23rd Nov. 1655, but was dug up at the Restoration.—NEAL'S Hist. of the Puritans, ed. 1822, vol. iv. pp. 133, 319. Pepys states in his Diary, 26th Oct. 1667, that "Mrs. Price tells me that the two Marshalls at the King's house are Stephen Marshall's, the great Presbyterian's daughters." The names of these two actresses, who were said to be women of loose morals, were Anne and Beche Marshall. I am not aware that proof has been given that they were in reality the children of this noted preacher.

John, who was created Earl of Bolinbroke, co. Lincoln, Dec. 28, 1624; was summoned to Parliament in his father's barony of Saint John. Slain at Edge Hill, Oct. 23, 1642.

<sup>117</sup> A member of the family of Palæologus of Landulph, co. Cornwall, who are believed to have been a branch of the Imperial house of Constantinople. The English Palæologoi have long been extinct in the male line, both here and in the West Indies, to which some of the members of the family emigrated. Their blood, transmitted through females, doubtless yet flows in the veins of many a Devonshire and Cornish gentleman.

“Fors non mutat genus.”

The person here indicated may possibly be Theodore Palæologus, son of Theodore Palæologus of Landulph, who died Jan. 21, 1636. This Theodore was afterwards a sailor, and died at sea in 1693, on board the Royal Charles. From his will, which was proved at Doctors' Commons, it seems that he had no issue.

The following entry occurs in the Burial Register of Westminster Abbey. It is probable that it relates to the Theodore Palæologus of Lord St. John's Regiment.

“1644 Theodorus Pahiologus
 was b<sup>d</sup> near the lady St.
 John's tomb May 3.”

Dr. Calibut Downing.<sup>125</sup>

<sup>125</sup> The eldest son of Calybut Downing of Shennington, co. Gloucester. Lord of the Manors of Sugarfwell and Tyfoe, co. Warwick. A commoner of Oriol College, Oxford, 1623. Rector of Hickford, co. Bucks, and of West Ildrey, co. Berks. Exchanged the latter rectory for that of Hackney, near London. Died at Hackney, 1644. Calybut Downing had the misfortune to be the father of George Downing, a man notorious for one of the blackest acts of perfidy to be found in our annals. George Downing began life as a minister of religion, having been Colonel Okey's Chaplain.

<sup>149</sup> This is probably the James Temple who was one of the commissioners for the trial of King Charles I. He was tried after the Restoration, but the extreme penalty of the law was not inflicted. Supposed to have died in the Tower.

<sup>150</sup> John Alured was a Yorkshireman, probably a native of Hedon in Holderness, which borough he represented in the Parliament of 1640. He was one of King Charles I.'s judges, and signed the warrant for his execution. Although he died before 1660, his name was put in the act of attainder that his property might be forfeited. His brothers, Lancelot and Matthew Alured, were active on the side of the Parliament.

<sup>151</sup> Sir John Hotham, Knight, was created a baronet, January 14, 1621. He was Governor of Hull at the breaking out of the Civil War, and refused King Charles I. admittance into that town, March 23, 1642, for which he was proclaimed a traitor by the King. He and his son, Sir John Hotham, Knight, were afterwards discovered to be corresponding with the Earl of Newcastle and other Royalists, for which acts they were tried and suffered death, 1645. Sir John Hotham represented a good old Yorkshire family. He had five wives—1, Katherine, daughter of Sir John Rhodes of Barlborough, co. Derby; 2, Anne, daughter of Ralf Rookesby [Rokeby], a far-away kinfwoman of the Editor's; 3, Frances, daughter of John Legard of Ganton, co. York; 4, Katherine, daughter of Sir William Bamborough of Oufan, co. York; 5, Sarah, daughter of Thomas Anlaby of Etton, co. York. John Hotham the younger was son of his first wife: he was married thrice—1, to Frances, daughter of Sir John Wray of Glentworth, Baronet; 2, to Margaret, daughter of Thomas, Viscount Emeley; 3, to Isabell, daughter of Sir Henry Anderson of Long Cowton, co. York. The arms of Hotham are Barry of ten argent and azure, on a canton or, a Cornish chough sable, legged gules.—Visit. Ebor. 336.

The register of All Hallows, Barking, contains the following entries:—

<sup>152</sup> Nathaniel Fienes, ſecond ſon of William, eighth Baron, and firſt Viſcount Say and Sele, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of John Temple of Stow, co. Bucks. He was one of the committee nominated by Parliament to accompany Charles I. into Scotland. Defeated by Prince Rupert near Worceſter, Sept. 23, 1642. Governor of Briſtol, which he ſurrendered to Prince Rupert, July 26, 1643, for which act of reputed cowardice he was tried and condemned to death, but pardoned. Keeper of the Great Seal to the Protector Richard Cromwell. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Elliot of Port Elliot in Cornwall. Died at Newton Toney, near Salisbury, Dec. 16, 1669.

The cavaliers made merry over the defeat of Fienes and his followers before Worceſter. More than one piece of doggerel relating to this adventure has come down to modern times:—

“Thither came Fines, with armes complete,
 The town to take and Byron defeat,
 Proviſions were made but he ſtaid not to eat,
 Which no body can deny.

“But as ſoon as he heard our great guns play,

<sup>153</sup> Most probably the Col. Dalbier who assisted in the taking of Basing House, Oct. 1645. He was a Dutchman by birth, and it was from him that Oliver Cromwell "learned the mechanical part of soldiering." In July, 1648, he had deserted to the Royalists, and was killed in a skirmish at St. Neots.—CARLYLE'S Cromwell, i. 192, 198, 276.

<sup>154</sup> Sir Arthur Haselrigge, Bart., eldest son of Sir Thomas Haselrigge of Noseley, co. Leicestershire. Brought forward the bill in the House of Commons for the attainder of the Earl of Strafford. One of the five members accused by King Charles I. of high treason. The soldiers of Sir Arthur's troop were "so prodigiously armed, that they were called by the other side the regiment of lobsters, because of their bright iron shells."—CLARENDON'S Hist. p. 402. They were, nevertheless, defeated by the Royal army at Roundway Down, July 5, 1643, where Sir Arthur was badly wounded. He was one of King Charles I.'s judges, but did not sign the death-warrant. He died in the Tower shortly after the Restoration.

A true Copie of the Instructions agreed upon by the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament, and sent to his Excellency the Earle of Effex Lord Generall of the Army, concerning the advancing of his Forces towards His Majesty, &c.

FIRST you shall carefully reſtraine all Impieties, Prophaneneſſe, and Diſorders, Ryot, Infolence, and Plundering in your Souldiers, as well by ſtriſt and ſevere puniſhment of ſuch offences, as by all other meanes which you in your wiſedomes ſhall thinke fit.

Secondly, your Lordſhip is to march with ſuch forces as you thinke fit towards the Army, raiſed in his Maſteſties Name againſt the Parliament and Kingdome, and with them, or any part of them, to fight at ſuch time and place as you ſhall judge to conduce to the peace and ſafety of the Kingdom; And you ſhall uſe your utmoſt endeavours by Battaile or otherwiſe to reſcue his Maſteſties perſon, and the perſons of the Prince, and Duke of Yorke, out of the hands of thoſe deſperate perſons who are now about them.

Thirdly, you ſhall take an opportunitie in ſome ſafe and honourable way, to cauſe the Petition of both Houſes of Parliament herewith ſent unto you, to be preſented unto his Maſteſtie, and if his Maſteſtie ſhall pleaſe thereupon to withdraw himſelfe from the forces now about him, and to reſort to the Parliament, you ſhall cauſe all theſe forces to diſband, and ſhall ſecure and defend his Maſteſtie with a ſufficient ſtrength in his returne.

Fourthly, you ſhall publiſh and declare, that if any, who have been ſeduced by the falſe aſperſions caſt upon the proceedings of the Parliament, as to aſſiſt the King in the acting of thoſe dangerous Counſels, ſhall willingly within ten dayes after ſuch publication in the Army, returne to their dutie, not doing any hostile act within the time limited, and joyne themselves with the Parliament, in defence of Religion, his Majesties person, the Liberties and Lawes of the Kingdome, and priviledges of Parliament, with their persons and Estates, as the Members of both Houses, and the rest of the Kingdome have done : That the Lords and Commons will be ready upon their submission to receive such persons in such manner as they shall have cause to acknowledge they have been used with clemency and favour : Provided, that this shall not extend to admit any man into either House of Parliament who stands suspended, without giving satisfaction to the House whereof he shall be a Member : and except all persons who stand impeached, or particularly Voted in either House of Parliament for any delinquency whatsoever ; Excepting likewise such Adherents of those who stand impeached in Parliament of Treason, as have been eminent persons and chiefe Actors in those Treasons ; And except the Earle of Briftoll, the Earle of Cumberland, the Earle of New-Castle, the Earle Rivers, Secretary Nicholas, Master Endimion Porter, Master Edward Hide, the Duke of Richmond, the Earle of Carnarvan, the Lord Viscount Newarke, the Lord Viscount Faulkland, being one of the principall Secretaries of State to his Majestie.

Fifthly, you shall apprehend the persons of all these who stand impeached in Parliament, or have been declared Traytors by both or either House of Parliament, or other Delinquents, and you shall send them unto the Parliament to receive condigne punishment according to their offences.

Sixthly, you shall receive the Loanes, or Contributions of Money, Plate, or Horfe from all his Majesties loving Subjects, which they shall be willing to make for the support of the charge of the Army, and better discharge of the service of the Common-wealth ; And you shall certifie all such summes of Money, and the value of such Horses, that the persons thereupon may have the publique faith for payment to be made unto them, as to others of his Majesties Subjects upon the subscription of Money, Plate, and Horfe.

Seventhly, you shall carefully protect all his Majesties loving Subjects from rapine and violence by any of the Cavaliers, or other of his Majesties pretended Army, or by any of the Souldiers of the Army which you command; and you shall cause the Armour and Goods of any person to be restored to them from whom they have been unjustly taken.

Eighthly, you shall observe such further Directions and Instructions as you from time to time receive from both Houses of Parliament.

A List of his Majesties Navie Royall, and Merchants Ships; Their Names, Captaines, and Lieutenants, their Men and Burthens in every one, now setting forth for the Guard of the narrow Seas, and for Ireland this yeare 1642.

<sup>162</sup> A member of a good family in the Isle of Wight, where he retired when put out of his command on the navy declaring against the King. During the King's imprisonment in that island he chanced to be at Newport, where he heard an account, probably much exaggerated, of the indignities which the King had to suffer, "and was so much transported with . . . . fury, being a man of more courage than of prudence or circumspection, that he caused a drum to be presently beaten, and put himself at the head of the people who flocked together, and cried, 'For God, the king, and the people!' and said 'he would lead them to the Castle and rescue the king from his captivity.'" Captain Burley was, for this rash act, tried for high treason, and suffered the extreme penalty of the law.—CLARENDON'S Hist. p. 629.

“From Fielding and from Vavafour,
 Both ill-affected men;
 From Lunsford eke deliver us,
 That eateth up childeren.”—Rump Songs, I. 65.

Sir Walter Scott quotes in Woodstock (chap. xx.) a verse from a contemporary song which sets forth how

“The post who came from Coventry,
 Riding on a red rocket,
 Did tidings tell, how Lunsford fell,
 A child’s hand in his pocket.”

A List of such English and Scotch Commanders, as Captains, Lieutenants, and Ensignes, and Sergeants, as have left their command under the PRINCE OF ORANGE, from his leager at Rhineberk, with the names of each Captain's Garrison.

[The following list exists as a broadside among the King's Pamphlets in the British Museum. If not unique, it is of a high degree of rarity. The date of its publication is probably fixed within a few days by a manuscript memorandum of the collector, who records that he acquired it "Aug. 12, 1642." After the name of Serjeant Philpot—that is, at the bottom of the first column in the original—there is written, "These are for the King's services." Whether this refers to the names in that column only, or to the whole list, may be a matter of doubt.]
